Cooperation for Achieving Sustainability in Asia

Abstract (Should be no more than 150 words):

During the last fifteen years, the world has experienced a dramatic change. The unification of economic systems due to the collapse of the East-West structure that happened in 1989, together with the rapid progress of ICT and the realization of the fragility of global climate systems which is symbolized by the global warming worldwide, has provided us a chance to consider about the finiteness of the earth resources such as energy, minerals, water, food resources and ecosystem services. Impacts of the increasing human activities in the limited capacity can easily deteriorate natural environment and result in a catastrophe regarding survivability of human on the earth. Asia will become a main actor since the population in this region continues to be above a half of the world total. It is our duty to work together in finding a sustainable style of human activities to coexist with natural ecosystems in Asian region.
